

10 things you can hire a Godseye agent to do for you

Field notes from the Godseye team · 8 min read · Guide

You don't need to learn AI. You don't need a course, a dashboard, or a new app. You need someone to do a job. That's what a Godseye agent is. You tell it what you need in Telegram. It does the work. You get the result.

Here are 10 specific jobs you can hand the agent right now. Each one is a finished outcome, not a tool to figure out. Pick the one that matches your problem. Pay for it. Get it back.

1. A landing page for your business — $29

You sell a service but you don't have a clean page to send people to. Every time someone asks "do you have a website?" you say "not yet." That costs you clients.

The agent builds you a dark-themed, modern landing page. Your business name, what you do, how to reach you, and a call-to-action. Mobile-ready. Delivered to you, not a template you fill in yourself.

Tell the agent your business name, what you sell, your contact info, and one photo if you have one. That's it.

2. Product descriptions that sell — $19 for 10 items

You're selling on Jumia, WhatsApp, Instagram, or your own store. You have the product but the description sounds like you rushed it at midnight.

The agent writes 10 product descriptions that actually sell. Clear, specific, the kind that makes someone stop scrolling and click buy. Not generic. Written for your product and your buyer.

Tell the agent what the product is, the price, and who it's for. 10 descriptions come back.

3. A list of 50 people who might buy from you — $29

You need clients but you don't know who to call. You post on social media and hope for the best. That's not a strategy. That's waiting.

The agent finds 50 real prospects. Names, what they do, where to find them, why they might need your service. Researched, not random. People your agent actually looked up.

Tell the agent what you sell, where you sell it, and your location. The list comes back.

4. A month of social media posts — $19

You know you should be posting. Every time you open Instagram you stare at a blank screen for ten minutes, close it, and feel guilty. The business runs but the marketing doesn't.

The agent writes 30 ready-to-post captions with topic ideas. A full month calendar. Copy, paste, post. Done.

Tell the agent your business and the kind of content you want. The calendar comes back.

5. A look at what your competitors are doing — $19

You know you have competition. You don't know what they're doing better. You check their page sometimes but you don't know what to look for.

The agent writes a breakdown of your top 3 competitors. What they sell, how they price, where they're strong, where they're weak, and where you can do better. Written so you can act on it, not just read it.

Tell the agent your business and who you compete with.

6. An email sequence that welcomes new customers — $19

You have an email list but you never send anything. Or you send one email and then nothing for three months. The list goes cold and you start over.

The agent writes 5 emails. A welcome message, an introduction to your business, a value email, a soft pitch, and a follow-up. Ready to send. Written to feel like a person, not a newsletter.

Give the agent your business name, what you sell, and the tone you want.

→ $19 — Hire the agent

7. A one-page business plan — $9

You have a business idea but no clear direction. Or you're already running one but you've never sat down to write out what it actually is. You know what you do. You can't explain it in one sentence.

The agent writes a one-page plan. Your value proposition, who you serve, your price range, how you reach customers, and what success looks like. One page. Clear.

Tell the agent about your idea. The plan comes back.

→ $9 — Hire the agent

8. An SEO report for your website — $19

You have a website but no idea if Google is showing it to anyone. You type your business name and you're on page three. That's not helping.

The agent checks your site and writes a plain-English report. What's working, what's broken, what to fix first, and how. No tech jargon. Just: here's what to do.

Give the agent your website URL.

9. Invoice and quote templates — $9

You send WhatsApp messages for pricing and Google Docs invoices that look like they were made in 2014. Your clients don't say anything but you know it doesn't look professional.

The agent builds you clean invoice and quote templates. Branded with your business name. Ready to fill in and send. They look like you hired a designer. You didn't.

Give the agent your business name and logo if you have one.

→ $9 — Hire the agent

10. WhatsApp broadcast messages that don't sound like spam — $9

You send messages to customers on WhatsApp but they all sound the same. Too formal. Too pushy. People read them and don't reply.

The agent writes 10 message templates. For offers, new products, follow-ups, reminders, and thank-yous. Written to feel human. The kind of message people actually read and respond to.

Tell the agent what you sell and the kind of messages you send.
